The company tour provided an in-depth insight into the production processes of agricultural machinery. After a warm welcome, managers visited the production facilities to learn about the different phases of the manufacturing process of agriculture machinery. This was an opportunity to appreciate the precision and care that goes into every step of the production cycle. A Mongolian participant remarked impressed: “It is very interesting to see how a German company assembles machine parts. I can take this information into my company and adapt it there.” The visitors also gained technical knowledge about the design and functioning of the machinery. “It’s great to understand how these machines work and how they make farmers’ work more efficient,” another participant highlighted.
